

THE HOUSE OF

FIELD & TIDE

A COLLECTED LIFE

The Collector's Edition

VOLUME I | SPRING 2027

FROM THE FOUNDER

Field & Tide began with a simple idea: that the places, traditions and memories that shape a life are worth gathering and carrying forward.

Field & Tide brings together limited-edition shawls, enduring objects, and stories of place. Inspired by gardens, travel, sporting traditions, and the coast, each collection reflects the landscapes, memories, and experiences that give a life its character.

MORNING TIDE

More than mere accessories, these pieces are designed to be a companion to your travels and the cherished memories of place that define you. Created to be worn, lived with, and carried forward, they are pieces whose meaning - like the stories they hold - deepens over time.

Welcome to the House of Field & Tide.
Where memories are gathered and live.

The Aiken

The Winter Colony, mapped in memory.

THE STORY

Some places are remembered not by a single landmark, but by the paths that join them. Aiken grew around the railroad and became a winter refuge for families, Thoroughbreds and sporting traditions.

From train and town to training track, hunt, polo ground and South Boundary's live-oak arch, The Aiken gathers the Winter Colony into an heirloom map to be worn, remembered and passed on.

Warm ivory, pine and red clay trace an imagined landscape and the enduring relationship between the town, its horses and its winter rituals.

A portrait of place carried close: distinctly Aiken, yet timeless in spirit.

The Winter Toast

A winter tradition, gathered in silk.

THE STORY

Some traditions are remembered not by a place alone, but by the gesture that brings people together.

On a clear winter morning, mounted riders pause beneath evergreen boughs. A glass is lifted, reins are gathered, and ceremony meets the saddle.

The Winter Toast translates that moment into silk: horse and rider, winter magnolia, cedar and berries, engraved coupes, a horseshoe and a lantern.

A shawl for arrivals, gatherings and rituals worth remembering.

Morning Tide

Where the land meets the water.

THE STORY

At first light, the marsh holds the world in suspension. Water moves quietly between the grasses, an egret waits at the creek's edge, and the horizon seems to belong equally to land and tide.

Morning Tide gathers that stillness into a wearable landscape. Winding creeks, sea oats and oyster shells preserve a place shaped slowly by water, weather and return.

Rendered in pearl, weathered ivory and soft tidal blue, the design follows the marsh's natural rhythm. A watchful bird, gathered shells and bending grasses form its quiet ornament.

A landscape to be carried - a sense of stillness remembered.

The House Anthology

The stories of the House, collected.

THE STORY

Before the collections became garden, equestrian, coastal and sporting, there was one piece holding the visual language of the House.

Marsh water meets a cultivated path. A journal remembers. A candle marks the rituals of home. A saddled horse waits beyond the field, while sea oats rise at the center.

The House Anthology gathers these places and objects into one silk landscape, connected by the way a collected life is lived - slowly, thoughtfully and over time.

Both archive and invitation: a portrait of the life surrounding the House.

The Hunt

The first sound is not the horn, but the leaves.

THE STORY

Oak and beech shift beneath the hounds as morning mist holds to the lane. Beyond a weathered stone wall, horse and rider move into the wooded distance.

The Hunt is an heirloom landscape rather than a sporting emblem. It honors country rituals: early light, old trees, weathered stone and the familiar road home.

A navy-and-gold border gives the scene its form, while a restrained scarlet accent brings ceremony to a palette softened by mist and leaves.

Worn over the shoulders, it carries the quiet anticipation of a day beginning.

The Cartographer

Every collected life begins with a place.

THE STORY

Before a place becomes part of our story, it must first be noticed: a garden gate, a familiar lane, the field beyond the house, the bend where fresh water meets the tide.

The Cartographer imagines the House as a landscape drawn from memory. Its route moves from garden to stable, woodland to marsh, gathering the places and rituals that shape a life.

At its center, the sea-oat compass points not north, but home. A dotted route follows what is familiar, meaningful and worth returning to.

A map for those who understand that place is part of who we become.

The Thoroughbred

Grace. Strength. Spirit.

THE STORY

The Thoroughbred is more than a horse. It is a legacy of spirit - athletic, intelligent and formed through an enduring bond between horse and rider.

The design places that noble silhouette in a quiet pastoral landscape. Live oak, open field and weathered fence surround the horse; saddle and tack recall the rituals of partnership.

Rendered in heritage sepia against warm ivory, it has the character of an old sporting engraving. A navy border gives it clarity and permanence.

A tribute to presence, power and the timeless beauty of the ride.
